For professionals working in the formal and informal societal systems nationally and internationally

Introduction to the Training Workshop

'Working from a culturally competent perspective' is one of a series of training workshops for professionals working in the formal and informal societal systems nationally and internationally; to understand what working from a culturally competent viewpoint is about. The necessity of it and ways to begin the cultural competency journey. What happens when we don't consider culture. To articulate your own definition and understanding of cultural competence. The relevant knowledge base when working with children and families, particularly Black African families. Delegates will explore the impact of their own self-concept on their work/intervention with Black children and families from a culturally competent perspective.

Note: It is recommended that this workshop is a pre-requisite for all other courses in this series.
